

Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21)

1. About the Graduate Certificate of Research Studies

The Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21) is an entry and nested exit award and offers foundational level theoretical and technical knowledge and skills in research. It aims to equip students from a broad range of backgrounds to work in research-related fields and support researchers with foundation research skills. Students will gain an understanding of literature, future research requirements and research proposal writing. The course includes strong foundations in research, which will provide students with the analytical and communication skills required for future research.

The Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21) provides an alternative entry path into the Doctor of Philosophy (PhD), the Professional Doctorate (Research) and the Master of Philosophy. When successfully completed, the student may be eligible for admission into those programs. The Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21) is also positioned as an exit award for the Master of Philosophy, Professional Doctorate (Research) and Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) where required.

Graduates at this level will have advanced knowledge and skills for professional, highly skilled work or further learning. They will have advanced theoretical and technical knowledge in one or more disciplines or areas of practice plus advanced cognitive, technical and communication skills, which they will use to analyse critically, evaluate, and transform information to complete a range of activities.

Graduate employment opportunities

Graduates of the Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21) will be positioned to contribute to research projects or to work in research-related fields, supporting researchers with research skills in government, community, or commercial settings. The course content is designed to be tailored to suit current employment context or areas of interest.

5. Advanced standing/academic credit/recognition of prior learning (RPL)

You may be entitled to credit for prior learning, whether formal or informal. Formal learning can include previous study in higher education, vocational education, or adult and community education. Informal learning can include on the job learning or various kinds of work and life experience. Credit can reduce the amount of study needed to complete a degree.

Applicants admitted based on prior higher education study may be eligible for Advanced Standing in the form of credit and/or recognition of prior learning (RPL) under the Torrens University Australia Credit Policy (<https://www.torrens.edu.au/policies-forms>).

- Students with completed subjects may be eligible for specified credit and/or elective exemptions
- Students who have completed a qualification at AQF level 8 (Graduate Diploma) or above may be eligible for block credit (where a block credit agreement exists)
- Students with a mix of formal study and informal and/or non-formal learning may be eligible for recognition of prior learning in addition to any credit approved.

Credit will not be applied automatically. Applicants must apply for credit and/or RPL as early as possible prior to each study period, with applications not accepted after week 2.

For further information about credit and recognition of prior learning please see <https://www.torrens.edu.au/how-to-apply/course-credits>.

7. Additional Information

Course Structure

The Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21) course structure is six months (40 credit points) in duration (normally full time). Eight subjects (10 credit points each) per year is deemed a normal full-time load.

Course Rules

To qualify for the Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21), the candidate must complete satisfactorily a course of study that comprises 4 core subjects. A combined total of 40 credit points is required.

Subjects

Core Subjects
RES611 Critical Literature Review This subject provides students with an overview of critical reading practices and develops the practical skills required to undertake a higher degree research project. Students will develop an understanding of the differences between practice and theory-based literature, and learn practical planning, searching, recording and interrogations skills needed to identify research gaps and undertake critical analysis with the view to establish future research directions. This subject will culminate in the development of a project statement for further scholarly research.

Core Subjects

RES612 Developing the Research Proposal

This subject develops the foundations of research, critical problem solving, and evidence-based decision-making skills required when undertaking a higher degree research project. Students will gain an understanding of the core structure of the research proposal, research integrity and the importance of positioning a chosen research project to offer significant contribution to new knowledge. Through the compilation and review of emerging constructs from literature, students will establish key concepts for analysis and build a framework for critical evaluation and investigation in the chosen field of study. On completion of this subject, students will understand the interrelationship of concepts, constructs, models, and frameworks in research, and possess the skills to communicate this in a structured project proposal capturing their emergent propositions ready for further investigation.

RES613 Methodology and Design

This subject aims to build the methodological literacy for higher degree research. It addresses methodological questions and specific issues connected with the choice of research methods and the associated forms of data. The subject includes discussion on the process of discovery and the formulation of the researcher's paradigm of reality. This subject caters equally for students pursuing various quantitative and qualitative methodologies in their research projects. It provides targeted training in key research methods as well as developing the student's overall understanding of the use and usefulness of various research methods in the field of research. This subject covers advanced topics in qualitative and quantitative research methodology relevant to the current set of projects undertaken by the cohort of students at this level.

RES614 Preliminary Research Thesis

This subject aims to provide students with the skills for planning, conducting, analysing, and reporting for a research project. This subject develops your understanding of the requirement for responsible conduct of research including ethical review for projects involving human research participation. On completion of this subject, students should be able to: further understand the significance of research and the challenges associated with undertaking independent research and design and complete a qualitative and/or quantitative research study using public data. You will report your project in a preliminary independent short thesis.

NB: some of the above subjects have pre-requisite and progression requirements.

Locations

The Graduate Certificate of Research Studies (GCRS21) can be studied in a combination of online and at the below Torrens University Australia campuses:
